Wildlife Photography Symposium Coming Up!

They are coming from San Diego, from Tempe, AZ, from Louisiana, from Idaho, Salt Lake

City and throughout the Teton region. They're all coming to the National Museum of Wildlife Art on September 28 for the TPC's biggest event ever. Will YOU be there?

This is your last chance to join us for TPC's fall educational symposium, Shoot Like A Girl, a special celebration of women in wildlife photography, September 28 at the National Museum of Wildlife Art. This is the biggest educational event ever hosted by TPC!

This full-day educational symposium will feature 6 inspiring women photographers for a day of storytelling and brilliant photography for everyone. Presentations, panel discussions, and Q&A will explore the power of wildlife photography to inspire as art and story. We'll discover how to stretch creative vision, learn tips for photographing in Yellowstone, and explore how photography can reveal wild lives and inspire change.

We're excited to welcome Morgan Heim as our keynote speaker. Morgan is a fast rising conservation photojournalist and filmmaker whose work has appeared in National Geographic, Smithsonian, Audubon, BBC, Discover and the Telluride Mountain Film, Banff and Wild & Scenic Film Festivals.

In other news...

On Wednesday the 11th, the Peer Mentors will meet. In October we will be moving forward to having 2 Peer Mentor Groups; Group #1 at the Meridian Trust on the 2nd Wednesday of the month and Group #2 on the 4th Wednesday of the month. More details here.

Our public presentation this month is "Best Practices For image Back-up" on Wednesday the 18th. So many members either don't backup their images or don't have a good system. Learn how easy it is to backup efficiently and completely. More details here.

The TPC Fall Members Gallery at the Teton County Library opens September 17! This incredible display of over 40 images from our juried competition will be a brilliant reminder of our members' collective talent and you don't want to miss it. The first half of the images will be up for a month, then the second half will be hung in mid October for another month. Plan to stop by and admire!

A Note From the President:

You have already read about the amazing events coming this month. Every activity of the Teton Photography Club happens because of active member participation – people stepping up and helping to plan events, engage with other members, and share their expertise and experience. Together we grow, improve, and enjoy our photography and images of our life experiences.

In my last presidential message I ask you to participate in two additional activities. We want and need you to volunteer to help our organization's future leadership, nominate candidates who are willing to help, and participate in as many club activities as possible. We need you to share your personal enthusiasm for photography with others in the area and encourage them to join with us. Nominations for TPC President close on September 7.

Second, I ask that you vote in our special electronic election in early / mid September to elect a President who will lead and inspire all of us for the next few years. Our Bylaws require only a simple majority of voting members, so your vote counts. The new TPC President will take office on October first – help him or her make 2020 be our best year ever.

Finally, I again want to thank all participating TPC members and our Executive Committee for making our organization happen. It has been a pleasure, honor, and tremendous learning experience for me to help lead the group since 2013. Without involvement of each of you it never would have happened. Thank you so much for your help, friendship, and sharing that makes us all better photographers and better stewards of our amazing region of the country.

Did You Know?

Maybe you have taken 8 or 12 images and stitched them together to get a high resolution landscape. It's a technique many photographers use, but Bentley (yes, the car company) has captured what they're calling "the world's most detailed landscape photo": a_57.7 gigapixel interactive ad stitched together from 1,825 individual frames captured from atop one of the tallest towers in Dubai.

This isn't the first time Bentley has experimented with NASA technology and gigapixel photography. Their first interactive ad, captured in San Francisco, featured a 53-gigapixel photo that let you zoom all the way in to the stitching on a car seat that was driving across the Golden Gate Bridge.

But as impressive as that photo was, they really outdid themselves on this one. Here's the image of the whole Dubai Marina.

See the little red box? Let's zoom in on it.

Pretty incredible, huh? Well, see the little red box on the front of that Bentley? Inside that red box is the grill and just above the grill is the Bently emblem. Let's zoom in on that...

Now that's incredible!

The NASA-derived gigapixel camera system was suspended 264 metres (~866 feet) up the Cayan Tower, where it had to contend with “100+ degree heat that created a haze and 20 MPH winds that threatened to disrupt stability.”

All of the source images took 48 hours to capture, and downloading the final stitched photograph took 18 hours. And now you know!

Last Frame

September brings us back in focus to beautiful fall photography, great events and an exciting new chapter in our history. By next month we'll have a new president and will have held the biggest event in our history. It's a great time to be a TPC member and we're glad to have YOU as part of it!
